HARVARD LAW SCHOOL

Harvard Law School, established in 1817, is the oldest continuously operating law school in the United States.

More than 1,700 full-time students are enrolled here, pursuing the J.D. (Juris Doctor), the LL.M. (Master of Laws) or the S.J.D. (Doctor of Juridical Science) degree. There are approximately 560 J.D. degree candidates, and candidates in the graduate programs represent more than 70 countries.

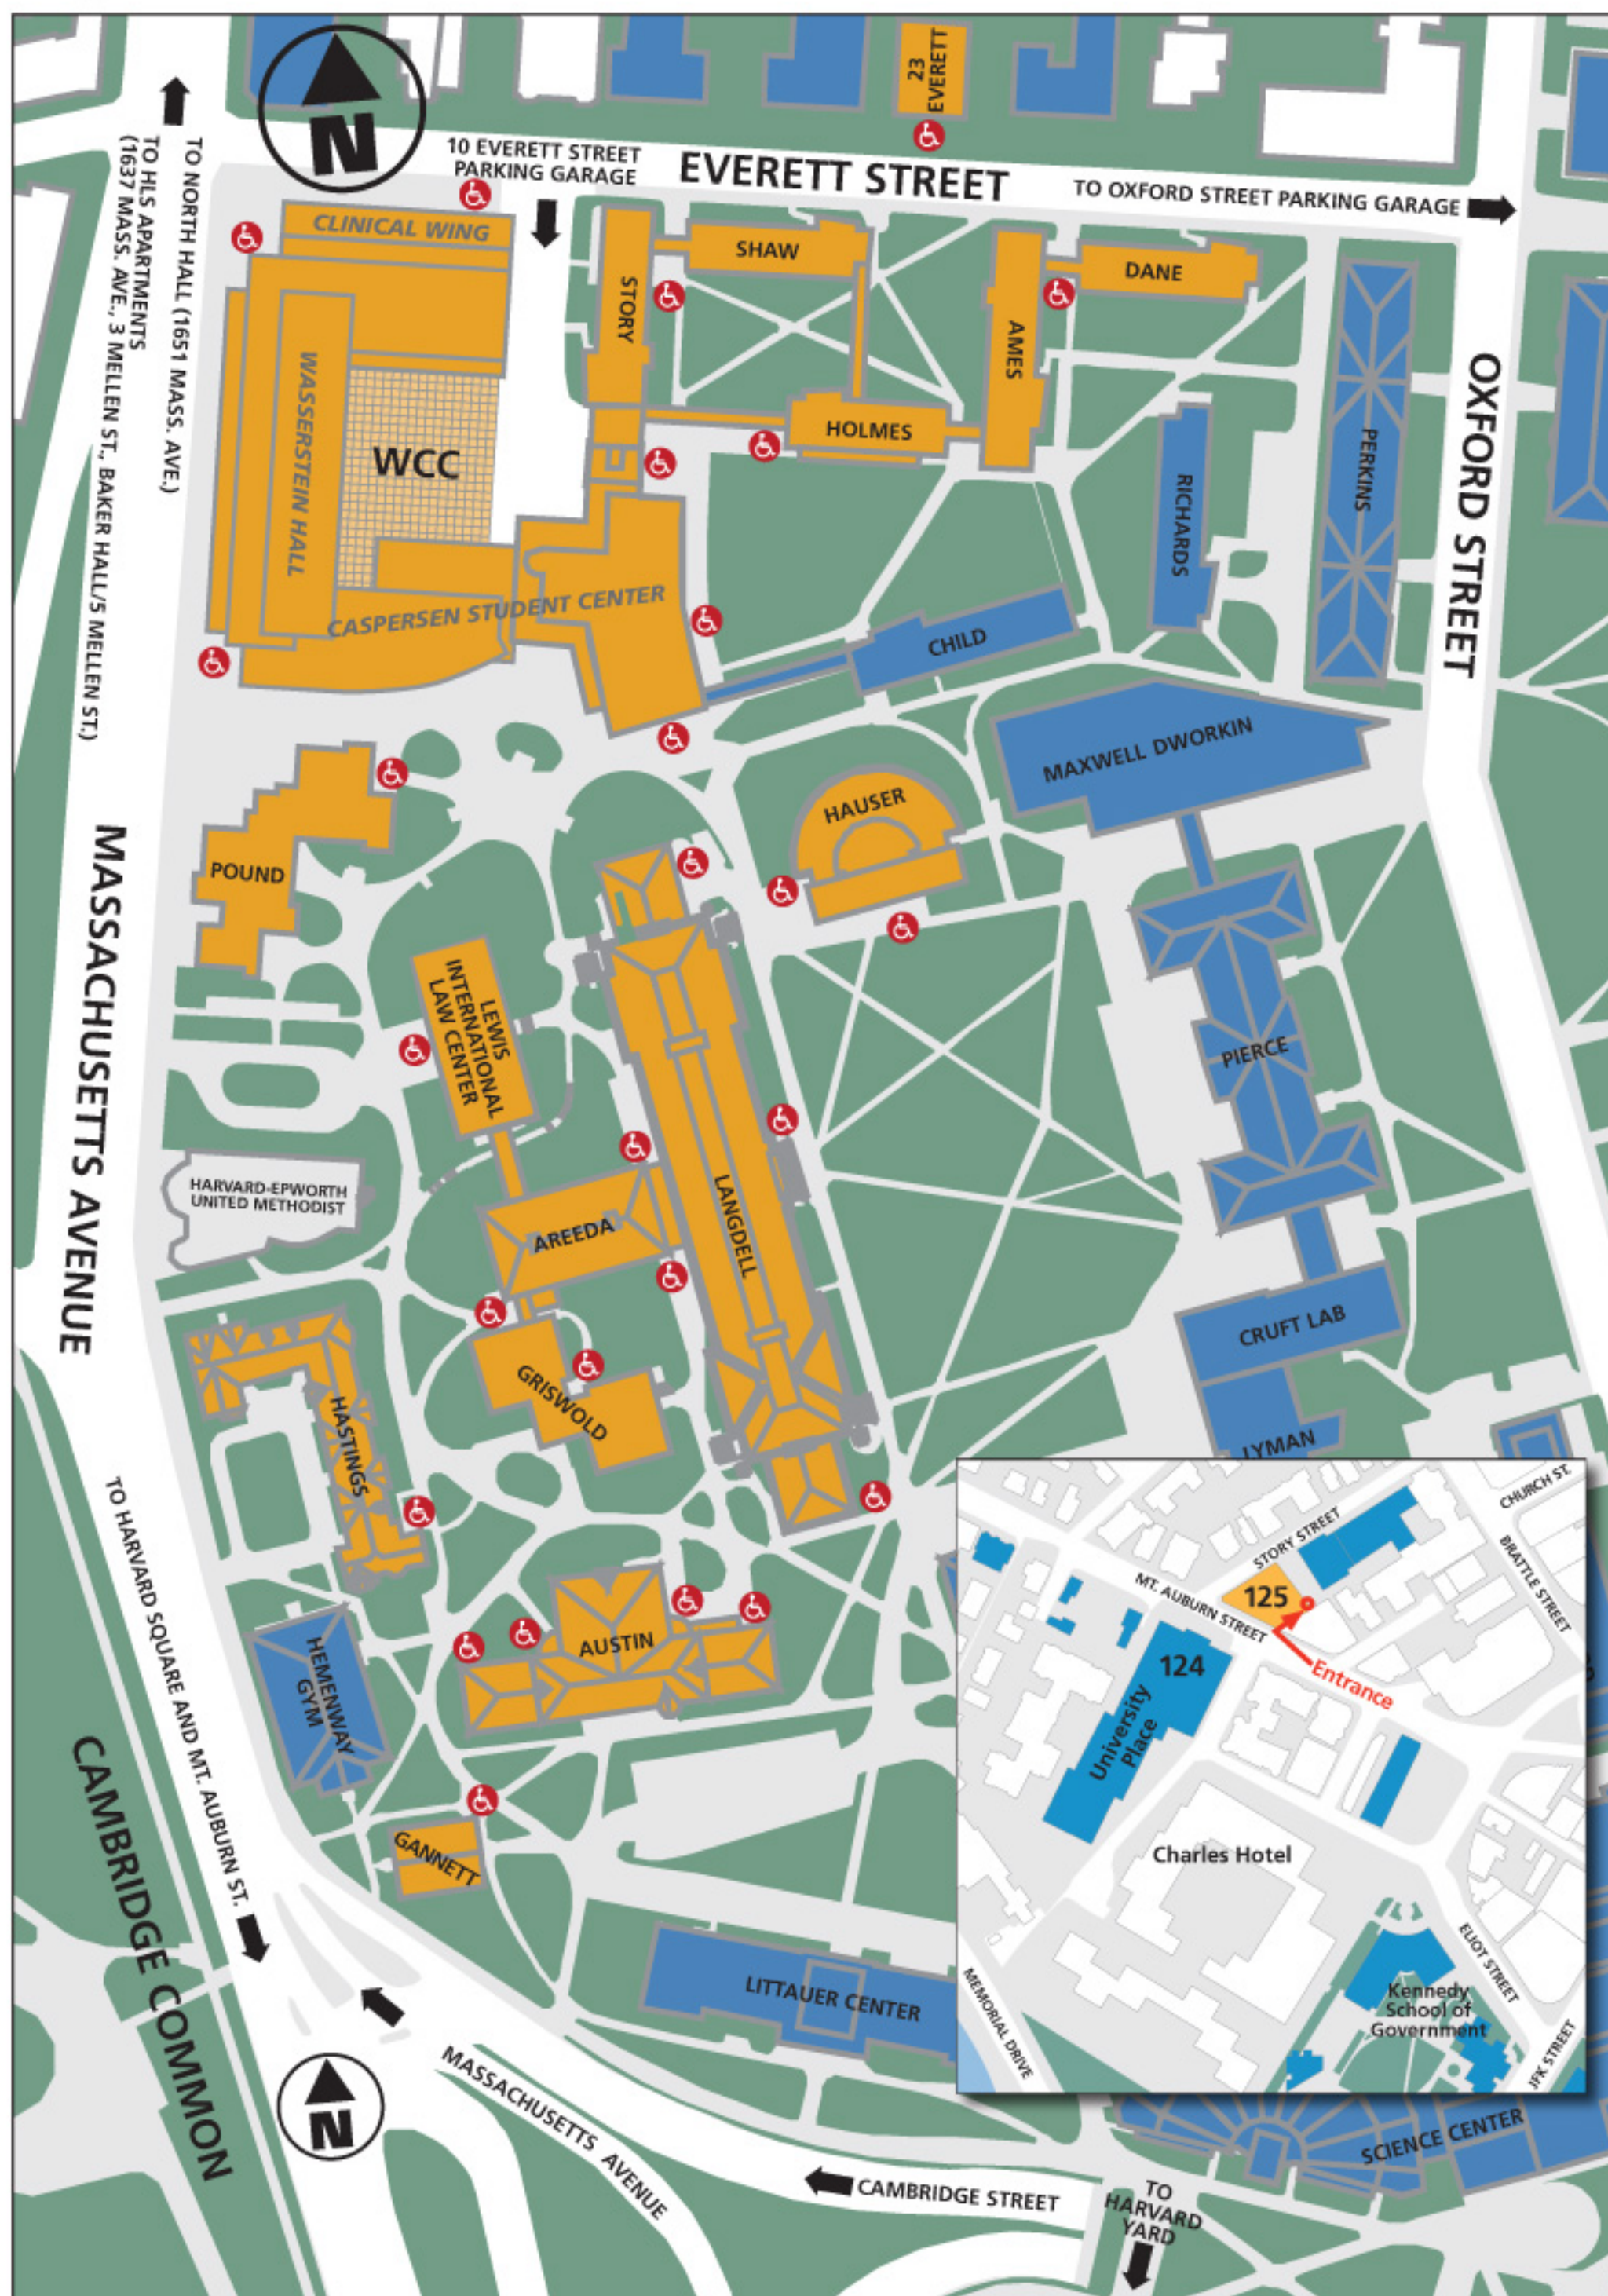

Law students participate in more than 90 student organizations whose activities center on clinical practice, student-run publications, social services, cultural interests and social events.

The faculty includes more than 100 full-time professors and approximately 150 visiting professors and lecturers on law. The curriculum features more than 400 courses, seminars and reading groups that cover a broad range of traditional and emerging legal fields.

Members of the HLS community work, study or live in 21 buildings. The Harvard Law School Library, headquartered in Langdell Hall, is the largest academic law library in the world. Austin Hall, built in 1883, is the oldest, continuously used law school building in America. Gannett House, built in 1838, is the Law School's oldest structure, and the Wasserstein Hall, Caspersen Student Center, Clinical Wing Building, which opened in 2012, is the newest.
